The dialogue between extraterrestrial civilizations and the human race has already begun. And it's about time you started paying attention: because the subject matter of this discussion has profound implications for our collective future here on Planet Earth. So, if you want to find out how you can take part in this historic conversation, all you need do is read on.

The basic message: that our visitors from across the Cosmos are trying to communicate to us, couldn't be simpler; they want us to live in peace. They have a very good reason for wanting this. And it isn't just a case of them wanting what is best for the human race. They also want what is best for themselves.

Now, in order to understand ET's motivations here, we need to understand something about the fundamental nature of the Universe: and the true nature of existence itself. Most people are familiar with Einstein's concept of 'space-time', but how many have really understood it? You need to think about it this way: space (the warp) and time (the weft) are woven together to form the fabric of the Cosmos. This fabric – imagine it to be a tapestry if you like – extends outwards in all directions to infinity. Now to cross that fabric in any meaningful way – to travel interstellar, or even intergalactic, distances – we need to overcome more than just the spatial dimensionality of our reality; we also need to conquer the temporal dimensionality bound up within space-time. Therefore, we cannot just cross space – we must also travel through time.

( Achieving this mightn't be as difficult as many would have you believe. Please download – and read – this pdf document:

And this is what worries ET. At the moment alien technology is, perhaps, a million years more advanced than ours. At the moment we do not threaten extraterrestrials in any way. But what happens if we achieve interstellar travel? What happens when we are able to travel back through time and attack ET's homeworld whilst it is still in its technological infancy?

So ask yourself - what would you do if you were The Extraterrestrial? Bear in mind that our visitors have already seen what we do to our own kind. They have witnessed the horrendous crimes that we perpetrate against each other. Now, if you were ET, would you allow us: along with our pathologically murderous mentality, to spread out across the Milky Way Galaxy?

This is why we must – as a race – grow up and embrace peace. We must do this for our own sakes and for the generations yet to come. We must do this so that: at some future date, we can stand - as equals - face to face with ET and embrace him.

Now let's get back to that conversation and look at some background material.

On the 16 September 1994 an alien visitor to our world delivered a terrifying message: describing the nuclear apocalypse that will befall us if we do not change our suicidal behaviour, to a group of 62 schoolchildren at Ariel Elementary School in Ruwa, a small rural township situated 20 kilometers from Harare in Zimbabwe. I am not going to set out the testimony to this encounter: elicited from these children by celebrated psychiatrist John E Mack, here. Instead I would like the reader to hear this remarkable testimony delivered directly from the children themselves.

Please use this link: to a short YouTube video, to begin your research into this event.

Personally, I found the guileless, wide-eyed sincerity with which these young students tell their disturbing story to be totally convincing.

We must also consider the motives of the messenger here. What prompted this alien to cross the vastness of interstellar space to deliver his message? Why did he choose 62 schoolchildren – instead of a powerful head of state – to be the recipients of his dire warning? There are two logical conclusions that can be drawn here. The first of these is that alien civilizations are concerned about our future and wish to communicate their concerns to us. The second is that they don't trust our 'leaders' to pass on their message accurately and honestly. They chose the children because they knew that their message would be passed on without being modified to suit anyone's agenda or political considerations.

By now you should be aware of at least one thing for sure: that message is intended for you. How you will respond to it, however, is entirely up to yourself.

Besides attempting to communicate his concerns by telepathically implanting apocalyptic visions of mankind's demise in the minds young schoolchildren, ET has also taken direct action that clearly demonstrates his opposition to our weapons of mass destruction. Evidence to support this emerged at the first Disclosure Project presentation: organized by Dr Steven Greer.

Among the many eyewitnesses - to otherworldly encounters - that took the stage on May 9th 2001 was a guy called Robert Salas. Mr Salas had served as a captain in the United States Air Force back in the sixties and seventies. His testimony at the Disclosure Project centered around an incident that occurred in 1967 when he was serving as a deputy missile combat crew commander at an ICBM (inter-continental ballistic missile: equipped with warheads that possess vastly more destructive power than the Hiroshima bomb) launch facility in Montana. The facility consisted of ten launch silos: each containing one Minuteman missile. Whilst on duty: in the underground command center, at the site near Malstrom, Montana, he received a phone call from the above-ground guard post at the main gate to the complex. It was the NCO in charge of security. In a panic stricken voice the sergeant told Salas that there was a, 'Glowing red,' saucer shaped craft hovering just outside the main entrance. 'It's just sitting there...what do we do?' Salas told him to hang on while he went to inform the base commander: Lt. Fred Meiwald. It was as he spoke to his CO that the first alarm sounded. Both men looked across to a panel of annunciator lights: that indicated the status of the missiles under their control, to see that one of these was now off-line. As the alarm continued to sound another soon followed. Then two more missiles went down simultaneously. It wasn't long before all ten missiles at the base had been rendered 'inoperable'. Twenty-four hours would pass before maintenance crews could bring the missiles back on-line.

In the aftermath of the incident Salas discovered that the same fate had: on that very same night, befallen another Minuteman base located 20 miles away from Malstrom. UFOs were reported in the vicinity – and another ten missiles were then 'taken off-line.'

These events occurred at the height of the cold war so it should come as no surprise that nothing was known about them - outside of the small circle of witnesses and the officers that 'debriefed' them - at the time. This was, after all, the era of 'deterrence' and 'mutually assured destruction,' - and neither side was going to communicate to the other that their nuclear capability had been compromised.

Since Salas stepped forward in 2001, more people: present at the bases on the night of 16 March 1967, have also come forward to corroborate his story.

There has, also, been other cases involving UFOs and 'interference' with nuclear weapons technology. These include the Rendelsham Forest incident from 1980. Here UFOs were witnessed over-flying the US Air Force installations at RAF Bentwaters and Woodbridge and shooting 'beams of light' down into bunkers that contained nuclear warheads.

Similar tales are also now emerging from Russia, mainly centered on a secret facility at Kapustin Yar: Russia's 'Area 51'. One of these even relates how a UFO appears to have 'initiated' a launch sequence count-down. Luckily – for us – the sequence terminated when the UFO left the area.

And it doesn't end there. In his book, 'UFOs and Nukes: Extraordinary Encounters at Nuclear Weapons Sites,' author and researcher Robert Hastings presents us with a history of this phenomenon that stretches from as far back as 1948, to as recently as 2003. When researching this work the author interviewed 120 eyewitnesses and collated together declassified documents from many different official sources. This is serious evidence presented in a book that addresses an extremely serious issue. Evidence enough for us to conclude that the extraterrestrials themselves are very, very serious - and persistent - about their interest in our weapons of mass destruction.

So now ask yourself: 'What are our visitors trying to communicate to us by persisting with this pattern of behavior?' Think about it. They are temporarily disabling these weapons. They are not destroying them altogether. And they are doing this repeatedly in order to draw our attention to the fact that they are, indeed, doing it.

There is only one conclusion that can be drawn here. The extraterrestrials are asking us a question, they are offering us a way out of the nuclear nightmare. They are clearly telling us that if we send them an unequivocal indication that we desire to be free of all weapons of mass destruction, then they will oblige us by destroying – or otherwise rendering useless – the weapons currently held in stockpiles around the world.

I would now ask the reader to examine their conscience. How can we not send ET that indication? We owe it to ourselves. We owe it to our children and grandchildren. We owe it to the future viability of all life on Planet Earth.

You and I both know that our governments will not do anything to end the madness of WMDs and war. Quite the contrary. They are currently engaged in preparing us for war: first against Syria, and then Iran. They are doing all this at the behest of the banks and corporations. You should also note that those responsible for starting this war will survive it. Even if this war leads to a full-blown nuclear exchange, the warmongers will be safely cocooned underground in their bomb shelters: built with your tax money. So they will survive and millions of us – our sons and daughters, grandparents and grandchildren, brothers, sisters, aunts and uncles – will die.

But this war need never happen. We have been given an option: by our visitors from across the Cosmos, that – should we choose to exercise it – could free us from the nightmare and put an end to war forevermore.

Well, are you ready to exercise that option?

If you are - this is what you need to do. Visit Change.org. In the 'Search petitions' box type: 'End the Madness'. Hit the search button. This will take you to the page featuring my petition. My petition calls upon, 'All intelligent entities of goodwill, including the entire human race, to help us achieve our desire to rid our world of all weapons of mass destruction and put an end to war'. Next, fill in the required fields and electronically sign this petition. That's it. The whole process should take you about five minutes.

Alternatively, you can hit this link and save yourself some time:

Now, if I am not mistaken you – the reader – will have a couple of questions for me at this point.

- The petition doesn't mention aliens, why? Well, not everybody believes in them. But any sane person wants peace and to be free of the constant threat of nuclear annihilation.
- How do I know that the aliens will respond? The short answer here is, I don't. But I believe that they will. I believe that I have correctly interpreted the message that was delivered via those 62 schoolchildren at Ruwa Elementary School, and the motivations behind ET's direct interference with our nuclear weapons technology.

Furthermore, by signing my petition you will be sending a clear message – to the warmongers – that you are not willing to fight in, or condone, a war that only serves the interests of a select few.

There is also something else that you should consider. Imagine millions of people, from all over the world, all calling out for the same thing: PEACE! When all those people finally understand that they can speak as one - they will realise that they can act as one. They will realise that we are not enemies, and they will stop listening to the politicians that lie – and connive with the banks and corporations – to convince us otherwise.

Such a development: the world rising and speaking as one, would – of course – make headline news. It would become the hottest topic discussed on the TV and radio. TV and radio channels broadcast programs using electromagnetic radiation. And that radiation isn't confined to the circles of the world. It propagates outward: into the immensity of the Cosmos, at the speed of light. So ask yourself one last question: who is out there, right now, monitoring our broadcasts? You got it, ET will hear us. He will hear our response to his question and he will react.

Now please sign my petition. And I promise you – you will believe.

Peace, Love & Respect
